143rd STATE REP TOWN HALL ANNOUNCED

DOYLESTOWN, PA --- The three candidates for State Representative in the 143rd assembly district will gather in their first town hall meeting to take questions directly from voters on Sunday October 12 at the Studio of Ben Solowey in Bedminster Township from 7 to 8:30 pm. Democrat Diane Allison, Independent Tom Lingenfelter and Republican Marguerite Quinn have been invited to participate after the standing room only crowd for their first debate on October 2nd. This will be an open format town hall meeting.

“I am delighted that we have the chance to talk directly to the voters again,” says Diane Allison, “I know there were lots of question left unasked the other night because of time, so this is a great opportunity to answer any and all queries from voters. There are a lot of issues facing our district and our state at this time: property taxes, alternative energy, education and most of all reform in Harrisburg, and voters should know who would be the best to represent them in state legislature. I believe the voters want to hear a thoughtful discussion of the issues facing our district and our commonwealth. I invite the public to come hear the truth for themselves.”
